Micro adventures catch on

RICHARD MAYS

Keeping the kids occupied over the school holidays can be a challenge. Heather Knox knows all about those challenges. She has two small pre-school children, but has come across a novel way of keeping them active and amused.

Earlier this year, Heather set up a local family-adventure group with the aim of not only stimulating her own two and four-year-olds but also encouraging other local families who like getting outdoors with little kids.

"We've called it Manawatu Family Microadventurers (MFMA). We started towards the end of last summer, but have been out and about ever since, and we're now sharing local information and getting out and getting muddy!"

"We've been out there in 'or-rental rain...and it wasn't the kids who were complaining."

The idea takes advantage of the free parks and play areas, and Heather has taken her children on a "slide crawl" through all the city parks.

"In June I started an informal, six-to-eight family group on Fridays which has been going at different local parks and playgrounds."

Heather sees this as an alternative to organised preschool activities, and is working with Pricus CityWise and Pricus Primary School to set up an outdoor play area for pre-schoolers and children at Riverdale Kindergarten.

"People thing we're crazy. We go out in the rain. We make use of the freely available great outdoors play area has several advantages over inside. There's the novelty of it all for a start."

MFMA has set up a Facebook page and is working with Pricus CityWise and Pricus Primary School to set up an outdoor play area for pre-schoolers and children at Riverdale Kindergarten.

Passport To Play Palmy

December 14, 2016 at 1:28pm

Anyone still wondering what to do when you get your passport? Here's a step by step: find a pencil (you'll probably not find one in the grass though), find an orange post, put the passport page on the post, rub with the pencil! Will you share your own step by step photos with us? #playpalmy

Recommendations

That PNCC:

- Acknowledges there is a 'gap in the market' for this type of initiative & that social media is the best medium to engage with the community.
- Actively prioritises, promotes & collaborates on community engagement initiatives. This should include an easy pathway or 'one stop shop' for people to contact PNCC with ideas.
- Identifies the next steps required to build on the success of the Passport to Play initiative & moves towards incorporating this type of initiative into 'business as usual' to maximise community engagement and build civic pride.
