Festival for the Future 2017

22 young people nominated by Iwi, Tertiary and Secondary Schools attended and participated in the 3 day social innovation and social enterprise conference.

Massey enriches community diversity conversations

From left: Three community members, including Dr. Jane Brown and Dr. Jane Brown, Massey University academics, and a recent graduate share on their own individual personal and professional stories for a panel discussion as part of the Massey's Festival of Cultures.

Adorned New Zealand author Maureen Wray read from her book 'Being Chinese and Spies of the Islands' towards realising her New Zealand and Chinese identities, before participating in a panel discussion.

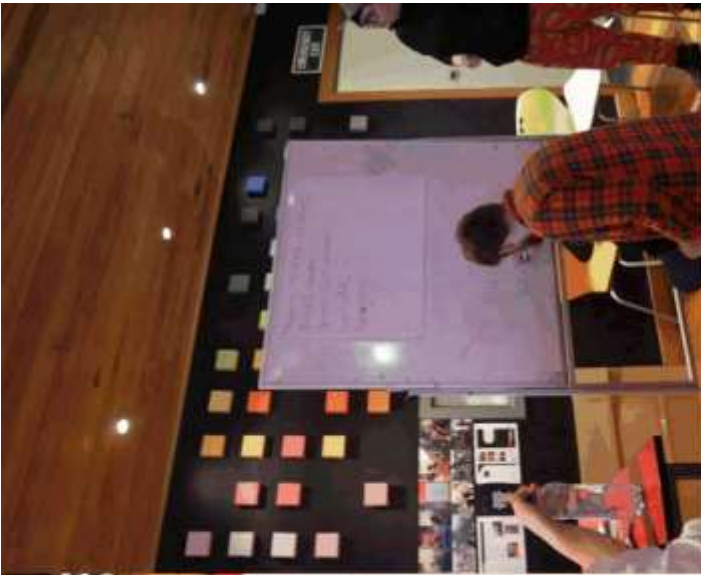

Senior lecturer in English for academic purposes and English as a Second Language (ESL) Dr. Jane Brown shared a discussion with the author and fellow panel members about cultural in English-speaking regions. Dr. Jane Brown and recent Massey Visual Arts graduate Tessa Wray.

The event drew a packed audience to the Palmerston North City Library, with the engaging discussion that ensued between the panel members and the audience reflecting the diversity of cultural identity in the region.

The event was organised by Palmerston North City Library in partnership with Tessa Wray. Contacted to share an update that seeks to grow the relationship between the University's Massey's Festival of Cultures and the region.

their names often have a strong influence upon people in the manufacturing

[illegible]

"I've found that mental health services often require people to be at a certain level of distress before they step in and that can be dangerous."

The care package is part of a practical help project through the national Tuscan Tangotutti leadership programme run by the Mayors' Association for 2025.
